Sheriff's deputies arrest man for Clarksburg auto crash

Yolo Co. Sheriff's Dept. investigators arrested 23-year old Kenneth Deshaun Smith in Sacramento yesterday in connection with the Oct. 27 homicide of Clarksburg resident Bryan Tenney. Smith was arrested without incident at a residence on Arliss Way, said a spokesperson for the sheriff's department.

Smith was involved in a two-car crash on South River Road south of Clarksburg which claimed the life of Clarksburg resident Bryan Tenney. Smith reportedly told investigators he had been attempting to kill himself by instigating the crash.

Smith was travelling without passengers, as was Tenney, when the two cars collided head-on and both drivers were pinned in the wreckage. Tenney was pronounced dead at the scene and Smith was flown to the UCD Medical Center for treatment.

An arrest warrant was issued on Nov. 6 after an investigation began by the sheriff's department and the C.H.P. Major Accident Investigation Team. The arrest was delayed due to Smith's medical condition following the incident.

The suspect is being held without bail at Yolo County Jail and is scheduled for a court appearance today (Dec. 2) at 1:30 p.m. in Department 9 of the county court.

Donors sought to provide food, gifts to local homeless families

The Broderick Christian Center's Transitional Housing Program is seeking organizations, businesses and individuals to "adopt" homeless families for the Christmas season.

Families need food baskets, winter clothes and toys for the children. The housing program can offer housing to up to 12 families at one time. The program provides case management and life skills classes to help them make the journey to a stable living situation. Graduates of the program can participate in after-care for up to a year.

To sponsor a family, call the Broderick Christian Center at 372-0200, and ask for Sharon.

Helena Helmold & the Christmas Basket Project

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

HELENA HELMOLD

Helena Helmold moved from San Francisco to West Sacramento over 40 years ago.

"I was just looking to get warm," said Helena, "but it also turned out to be a great place to raise my four children."

When her youngest child was only two years old, Helena suddenly found herself the sole provider for her family.

"I learned at a relatively young age what it's like to fall on hard times," said Helena, "and maybe that's one of the reasons I still really enjoy the work I do at the East Yolo Information Center."

The East Yolo Information Center for Alcohol and Other Drug Abuse (Helena is its Executive Director) provides support and counseling services for alcohol, drug, family and other related problems for all age groups.

"Among many other things," said Helena, "we help people with anger management and domestic violence problems. We also offer people a safe, drug-free place to spend time and socialize. Most of all, we give them the hope that things can get better."

Since 1979, Helena has also volunteered her time to the West Sacramento Christmas Basket Project.

"I started out helping with the sign-ups," recalled Helena, "and over the years, I've really come to appreciate how important the Christmas Basket is to so many citizens who live in this area. This year we'll help close to 3,000 people, half of them children under the age of 12, and it's a good feeling to know we can make a real difference in the lives of so many people at Christmas time."

The West Sacramento Christmas Basket Project is a non-profit corporation which distributes donated food and toys to needy individuals. Families begin registering in early December so their needs can be anticipated and planned for.

"We raised and spent about $11,000 last year," said Helena, "and our needs will probably be about the same this year."

The project has a 15-member board of directors drawn from local citizens, religious groups, community organizations, city officials, and business firms. The Christmas Basket began in 1969 and grew in the 1970s to its present size. The approximate cost of a Christmas Basket for a family of four is $25. While food is the most critical item, many people donate toys and they are also distributed to needy families. The baskets themselves usually contain poultry, vegetables, fruit, potatoes, soup, bread and milk.

Helena is this year's Christmas Basket Chairperson.

"Believe me," said Helena, "it's no fun to be hungry, especially at Christmas time, and like most communities, West Sacramento has its share of working poor people. It's getting harder and harder all the time for people who are earning the minimum wage to feed, cloth, and house their family, and the West Sacramento Christmas Basket Project is something everyone in this community can be very proud of. It would take me hours to mention all the people who make it possible each year, but they know who they are, and how much they are appreciated."

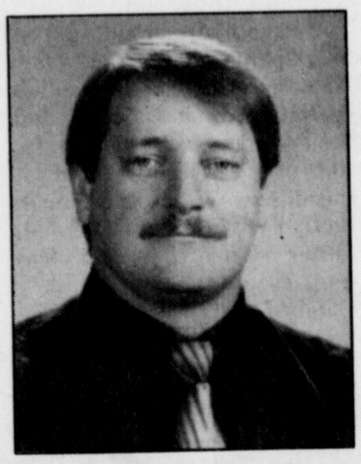

Donations of canned goods, baby food, fruits, staples and toys are still needed for this year's Christmas Basket. Volunteers are also needed for sorting foods and packing the baskets, and anyone interested in making a cash donation can do so by mailing it to: P.O. Box 1236, West Sacramento, CA 95605-1236.

"The important thing is that we need everyone's help so that as many West Sacramento families as possible can have a brighter holiday," said Helena, "and anyone who wants to help or get more information about the Christmas Basket can give me a call at 372-3360. Take my word for it, it's a great way to get into the Christmas spirit!"

Challenging season:

A conversation with River City basketball coach Jon West

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

JON WEST

Jon West has been the River City High School varsity basketball head coach since 1991 and his teams have won two league championships and never failed to make the playoffs. This year's group of talented athletes doesn't have the height and experience of some of his previous teams, but Coach West has been pleased with their work ethic and early season play and both he and his players are looking forward to another successful year.

"We've lost our first two games," said Coach West, "but they were against very good teams (Christian Brothers and Foothill) and both games could have gone either way. One of the losses was in overtime, and if our opponents hadn't hit a three-point shot just seconds before the end of regulation time, our record would be 1-1. Once we get into league play, I think we will be one of the best two or three teams -- along with Colfax and Mesa Verde."

Because this year's River City Raiders are smaller and quicker than usual, Coach West says he plans to have his squad play a more wide-open and up-tempo brand of basketball.

"A coach always tries to adjust every year to the kind of players he has," explained Coach West, "and this year is no different. Because of our speed and quickness, we will try to fast break every chance we can and then use a motion offense when we get into the half court. The hope is to create as many easy baskets as possible and not to let our lack of height become too much of a problem."

On the other end of the court, Coach West plans to play a lot of man-to-man defense and press the basketball whenever he can.

"We have a lot of players who like to play aggressive defense," said Coach West, "and we're going to encourage them to do that. Turning steals into points will be a big part of our game plan."

On offense, Coach West is counting on a number of players to contribute on a regular basis.

"Victor Valdivia and Malcolm Floyd are very good scorers," said Coach West, "and Zafar Niazi and Radai Mashriqi also shoot the ball extremely well. Alfredo Rodriquez is a tough, physical player who can be counted on to get his 8 or 10 points a game, and Javes Figueroa's quick hands on defense will also end up producing some points for us. Our bench is loaded with first year varsity players, and as some of them get more experience and confidence, I'm sure their contributions will increase, too."

Over the years, Coach West has found that each new basketball season brings with it a new set of challenges, but this year has been especially difficult, even painful.

"We all had our hearts broken when Matt Sidhu was killed in an automobile accident just before the season started," said Coach West. "Matt was an extremely important part of this team and it's almost impossible to explain all the ways we miss him. To begin with, we all loved him as a person, and just his presence was really important to us. I can't tell you how many times I've looked down the bench and wished he was still there, and I'm sure all his teammates feel the exact same way. He was also one of our two or three best players, and replacing him on the court is just not possible. He was one of those rare athletes who could play above the rim and pour in three-pointers, too. His outside shooting often kept us in games and sometimes even won them for us. It's hard to believe one kid can make such a difference to a basketball team, both on and off the court, but the truth is that Matt did."

Matt's River City basketball jersey (#12) will be officially retired on January 5th, in ceremonies preceding the tipoff of the team's first home court league game.

"Our kids always have him in their thoughts and they're making a conscious effort to include him in this year's season," said Coach West. "They have his number of the back of their shoes and we had a towel made up with his name on it that everyone touches before and often during games. Unfortunately, life isn't always like the movies,

City gears up to re-fill commissions

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger

The new configuration of the West Sacramento City Council is proceeding to decide who will serve on the city's boards and commissions.

New councilman Jim Cahill, in his first meeting Dec. 18, appointed Celia McAdam to the city planning commission.

He also appointed Greg Verdon to the economic development advisory commission, and Michelle Kelly Heffington to the parks and community services commission.

New mayor Christopher Cabaldon asked the appointees made by himself and former councilman Wes Beers to fill out applications for their commission posts if they would like to continue to serve, said city clerk Helen Kanowsky. The appointees of councilmen Greg Potnick, Bill Kristoff and Mark Montemayor asked that their own past appointees indicate whether they would like to continue.

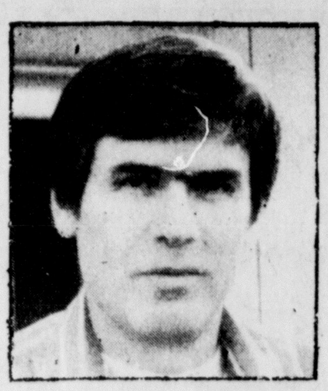

Interested new people may also apply for a place on one of the city's boards or commissions by Dec. 10 in hopes of a city council appointment. They may call the city clerk's office at 373-5800 or stop by city hall for an application. The council is scheduled to discuss new appointments Dec. 16.

The city council will be looking at re-filling its planning commission, housing advisory commission, youth commission, hazardous materials advisory commission, commission on aging, parks and community services commission, and code appeals board.

All have seven members (five members on each are appointed by individual council members and the other two are "at large" appointments) except EDAC, which only has five individually appointed members.

I had no idea how easy it is to be a famous poet

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

"Hey, Dad," said my twenty-something daughter with excitement, "you're not going to believe this!"

"What?" I asked, reluctantly looking up from the newspaper I was reading.

"Haven't you opened up any of today's mail yet?"

"No," I admitted.

"Well," she said with a big smile as she handed me a sealed envelope, "guess who just sent you a letter?"

"Who?" I asked, looking down at the envelope.

"The Famous Poets Society!"

"What?" I asked, even more surprised than my daughter.

"Well, aren't you going to open it?"

"But why in the world would the Famous Poets Society send me a letter?" I wondered aloud.

"Here," said my daughter as she grabbed the envelope from me, "I'll open it for you. You're taking all day."

"What's it say?" I asked with genuine interest.

"It says 'Congratulations, Mr. Fisher. You are invited to publish your poem, entitled I Think I Kneu, in our anthology, The Cherished Poems of the Western World'. I didn't know you write poetry, Dad."

"I don't," I assured my daughter.

"Well," she continued, "it says here that 'We are delighted to inform you that the Executive Committee of our Board of Directors, after reading and deliberating on your poem, has chosen it as a semi-finalist in our contest. Your poem was singled out wholly on the grounds of quality. Just to let you know, only a handful of the thousands of poems we receive each year are selected for publication and it's a true honor to welcome you as a member into our famous family of published poets!'"

"Here, give me that thing," I said, quickly taking the letter back from my daughter as it suddenly dawned on me what was going on.

"My dad's a famous poet!" said my daughter, still smiling. "How cool!"

"Look," I began to explain, "a few months ago, Steve (the otherwise rational editor of the News-Ledger) handed me a piece of mail he had received at the office and said if I had any old poems laying around, I should send one of them off to this contest they were having and I might win $1000. Anyway, just for the fun of it, I sent them a poem. I'd forgotten all about it, but that must be what this is all about."

"What was the poem about?" asked my daughter with interest.

"It was just something I wrote years and years ago when I first met your mother."

"You sent The Famous Poets Society a love poem about Mom?" asked my daughter in amazement. "Where is it? I want to read it!"

"Absolutely not!" I said firmly. "Now go outside and play or something, and don't be telling your mother or anyone else I did anything this stupid, either!"

After my daughter had hurried out of the room in search of her brothers to inform them that their father had written a love poem about their mother which would soon be appearing in an anthology entitled The Cherished Poems of the Western World, I decided I better read some of the small print in my congratulatory letter.

It turned out that I could indeed have my little poem published, but there were a few other things they wanted me to do, too. First, I had to buy the book, which cost $39.95, although each additional book after that was only $25. Then they wanted me to write a dedication for the poem, which only cost $10. They also suggested that I put a photograph of myself next to it ($15); commission an illustration to highlight the artistry of my poem ($20); submit additional poems ($20 each); fancy up the typesetting (an additional $1 for each line); and include postage and handling ($12).

So, after doing some quick arithmetic, I figured out that if I wanted to get the only poem I have ever written published, I would have to come up with approximately $111.95.

Moments later, my daughter and two of my sons stormed into the front room and said in unison, "We demand to read that poem!"

"Not on your life!"

SPORTS

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The 49ers, who have won 15 consecutive regular-season games, beat up the New York Giants 31-7 on Monday night but lost their defensive team leader in the process. All Pro lineman Bryant Young will be out for the season with a broken right leg. The 49ers will try and replace him with a combination of Gabe Wilkens, Shane Bonham, or anybody they can find on the waiver wire.

The 49ers will miss Young, who was the Niners' leader on the defensive side of the ball. Next up for the 49ers (9-3), who trail Atlanta by one game in the Western Division, are the 2-10 Carolina Panthers (10 a.m., FOX).

The Raiders (7-5) have lost their last two games and may be without QB Jeff George for the remainder of the season. George started the game in their 29-19 loss at home to the 3-9 Redskins, but was replaced again by Don Hollas. It looks like Hollas is going to have to lead the Raiders into the playoffs. The AFC wild card race tightened up as New England, Pittsburgh, Miami, New York, Buffalo, Seattle and Tennessee gear up for the final four weeks of the season. The Raiders can take care of one of the playoff teams this Sunday, when the Miami Dolphins invade the Oakland Coliseum at 1:15 p.m. This game is close to being sold out, so you might be able to watch it on TV.

Last week, i was 3-0, picking the Jets, Miami, and the 49ers on Monday night and improving my record to 21 wins, 14 losses and one tie. In week 14, I like the Arizona Cardinals (-4) over the Giants, and Miami (+3) at Oakland. On Monday night, take Tampa Bay (+7) at home against the Packers.

Can you believe the kind of money the Major League baseball owners are throwing around this winter? Arizona's owner Jerry Colangelo made Randy "The Big Unit" Johnson the game's highest paid pitcher, with a four-year contract worth $52.4 million! The Anaheim Angels, who are owned by the Disney Company, made ex-Red Sox player Mo Vaughn the highest paid player in baseball, with a six year, $80 million deal. That averages out to $13.33 million per year! I hope these owners are paying attention to the NBA's player contract problems. The NBA lockout is now into 154 days and counting!

The River City Rumble boxing event scheduled for Dec. 18, live on ESPN2 at Golden State Middle School, took a hard tumble last week.

The bout developed a problem when it was discovered that Budweiser uses their logo in the middle of the boxing ring, and state law prohibits advertising alcohol or tobacco on public school property. The fight is still on for Dec. 18, but was pulled out of the West Sacramento school and moved to the CSUS basketball gym.

Boxing promoter Don Chargin will be making the final announcement this morning concerning the new event location and information about refunds or ticket exchanges. For more information, call me at 372-7332.

See ya next week!

News-Ledger Editorial

After recession, city concentrates on 'infill'

Even the darkest clouds tend to have a silver lining of some sort.

The recession of the early 1990s, which hit the young city like a locust plague just as it was planning to realize its grand dreams of development and expansion, ended up helping to put the city's plans back on the right track.

As the '80s ended and the '90s began, West Sacramento's leaders were intoxicated by the possibilities of development. They envisioning seeing, soon, such "jewels" as the Lighthouse Marina Project, Raley's Landing, and Southport Industrial Park. But at the same time the city was encouraging these projects within city limits, it was also being besieged and enticed by planned developments outside of the city's boundaries.

Before the city had built out nearly all of the available land within its own limits, West Sacramento was being asked by developers to endorse their plans to "leapfrog" development to outlying areas. Several major developments beckoned the city to annex the land to its north and to its south, offering glitzy land use schemes touting everything from golf courses to fiberoptic communications construction.

Clarksburg was frightened and Woodland was nervous, but here, it all seemed possible. West Sacramento was seemingly going to develop everywhere at once. Often, concerns of reality (the cost of providing services to outlying, unconnected areas, for example) did not receive the priority they deserved.

Then the recession hit, and many of the projects on West Sacramento's front burner just a little bit earlier saw the pilot light go out on their plans. Included in this "slowing" and "culling" of development projects were all of those plans to develop and annex property outside of West Sacramento. A proposal working its way through the county government to grant West Sacramento rights to build on these lands withered on the vine.

With money hard to come by and development pressure lessened, the recession gave city leaders time to take a deep breath and make plans. The city solidified its plans for areas such as Southport, and the northern and southern annexation projects fell off the radar screen.

The result is that growth has been delayed, and will never occur at the rate West Sacramento once counted on. But when it does happen, growth will be more focused on building out what is already here -- Southport, the downtown riverfront and West Capitol Ave., for example. .

This is the way it should be.

It will always be attractive to land speculators to go out to the edge of a town and buy land (often farmland) cheap, and then try to convince government officials to give them development rights, thereby multiplying the value of the land. But this is not the way to plan and develop a city, and it was not clear that the early West Sacramento city councils understood this.

The '90s recession helped push this city to a better way -- one of orderly growth from the inside out.

We need a 'right to die' law

By Betty Rollin

It's called the California Conference on Physician Assisted Dying, and it was held on Friday, November 13 in San Francisco. It was hosted by the San Francisco Medical Society and Mayor Willie Brown Jr., and Dr. Kevorkian did not attend. That's because the physician assisted suicide movement is no longer about an eccentric ex-pathologist and patients hooked up to lethal IVs in trailers. It's about a lot of thoughtful professionals -- physicians, ethicists, hospice workers, lawyers, health-care administrators, ministers -- and ordinary people like me, who will be there because, for us, assisting in the death of a terminally-ill person is who wants to die is not a concept. We've done it.

My mother had ovarian cancer, fought the good fight and was drying, but in her view, not fast enough. She begged me to help her. I did. How could I not? She was my mother and I loved her and this was her last wish. And I knew she meant it.

Fifteen years have passed, and now I know -- as did my mother even then -- that she couldn't be the only terminally ill person who wanted out of life and who couldn't get there without help. "What do people do who don't have children?", she asked me, not idly, once she knew we would help her to die. As alone as we felt with our struggle, we knew we were not alone. But little did we know how many people,l how many families were going through the same agony -- enough to start a movement. Because the right-to-die movement grew -- and has grown -- not from intellectual theory, but from need, from fear and from the heart.

Legally, the issue has gone farther than I ever expected it to go in my lifetime, in 1997 reaching the Supreme Court. Although the court upheld the constitutionally of state laws barring assisted suicide, the court acknowledged that "[T]hroughout the nation, Americans are engaged in an earnest and profound debate about the morality, legality and practicality of physician assisted suicide," adding that "Our holding permits this debate to continue." As it has. And, also in 1997, a huge and telling majority -- 60 percent -- of the people of Oregon the first state to allow a competent, terminally-ill patient to receive a lethal prescription from a physician. A piece of paper is all, but a piece of paper that would have made all the difference to my mother and others like her. Oregon is the first state, but it is unlikely to be the last. Maine is mobilized. There are continuing efforts to change the law here in California.

Poll after poll demonstrates that most Americans want a change. The most recent one in California, conducted by the Death with Dignity Center in San Mateo, found that the vast majority of people in this state who were asked -- 71 percent -- support a terminally-ill individual's right to choose physician assisted death. In addition, 59 percent said they would be more likely to support an elected official if he or she favored allowing the practice.

And here's a nice irony: as a result of the controversy about legal aid-in-dying, the issue of pain has gotten a lot more attention. Under-medication for pain has been an ongoing fact in most hospitals, but suddenly physicians arguing against assisted death on the grounds that "we can keep people pain-free" now found themselves obliged to do so -- or at least to do better.

Suffering is just a word until you feel it. Or see someone you love feeling it. I've often thought that people who are against legal aid-in-dying are less cruel than they are inexperienced. Many people, luckier than they know, have never had their bodies turn into torture chambers. Many people believe the myth that pain can always be stopped by drugs. Drugs are amazing, but they don't work equally well on everybody. And besides, my mother would remind me if she were still here, don't forget about nausea -- as bad as pain and often untreatable.

I do believe that most patients, given the opportunity to end their lives, wouldn't. The wish to live is powerful, even under the most terrible -- and hopeless -- circumstances. In the year that physician-assisted death has been legal in Oregon, fewer than ten people have availed themselves of this help. But there is no way to count the number of people who have peace-of-mind just because the law is in place. Knowing that the option of death exists is, in itself, merciful. Since writing about my mother in Last Wish, I've heard from many people, most of whom are not sick, but they are afraid, not of death but of being strung up by the technology and left to live and suffer. They are afraid of being trapped in life with no way out. My mother got out. But she knew she was lucky. She wanted other desperate people to have the same opportunity. And in her memory, so do I.

Betty Rollin is the author of the recently republished book Last Wish and a board member of the Death with Dignity National Center in San Mateo.

Letters to the Editor

Call for participation

In November, we elected a City Council and our School Board.

We elected our representatives, and now it is time to go to the meetings to support them -- to understand the pressures on them and be inspired to study the major issues facing the city and the schools. What could be a real bonus (the ability to watch meetings on cable TV) can also have some negatives. The participation is passive.

The City Council meets tonight and the School Board next Tuesday.

Let's give the Council and WUSD Board a good start. Who knows -- perhaps we can revive the Citizen Advisory groups that used to meet regularly and study issues as they emerged, and give the elected officials the support needed in the decision making process.

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS

The Sacramento river registered seven feet six inches, U. S. gauge, at the Southern Pacific bridge yesterday. This is a better showing than has been reported since early last spring. A peculiar thing, too, has happened in the bed of the river north of the Southern Pacific bridge. The little islands that grew hay during the summer time are now completely submerged and the little sand hills that were dug up by a dredger to permit water to enter the intake of the Sacramento water works have been leveled below the water surface. Honestly, the Sacramento river begins to look like a real stream once more, but it has that same old muddy appearance, which will last for a few days. From the California Cooperative Crop Reporting ing service the following has just been received under date of November 1st:

Climatic conditions have been good for agriculture in California during October. The preliminary estimates of production for corn, grain, sorghum, white potatoes, sweet potatoes, apples, pears, figs, almonds, walnuts, raisins and wine grapes are the main features embodied in this report.

Weather conditions: The month just passed was generally favorable for agriculture throughout the state. There was some rain, confined principally to the northern part of the state, which eventually checked danger from forest fires. The rice harvest and bean threshing were delayed to some extent by the rains, but no serious damage seems to have resulted. Fruit harvest, with the exception of cleaning up the grape crop, has been completed. The rainfall, especially in the northern part of the state, accompanied by warm weather, brought on a good growth of grass in some localities, improving pasturage for livestock. Rains have also been beneficial in placing the soil in condition for plowing and grain seeding, which has progressed rapidly during the latter part of the month.

The condition of table grapes on November 1 was estimated to be 70 per cent of a normal—an improvement of 7 points compared with a month ago. A forecast of production, based on the present condition, indicates a crop of 300,000 tons of grapes of strictly table varieties produced on 104,000 acres. The 1924 bearing acreage of table grapes was 25 per cent greater than the bearing acreage of 1923. Shipments of all classes of grapes up to November 8 totaled approximately 53,000 cars, compared with the total movement in 1923 of 55,269 cars.

The total production of grapes of wine varieties is estimated to 350,000 tons produced on 127,000 acres. This indicates an average yield of 5,500 pounds per acre. Last year 428,000 tons were harvested from 121,000 acres. The 1924 season was generally favorable. Although the crop was below that of last year, the quality was good and the grapes ripened earlier than usual, which made possible an early harvest. The tonnage used locally in the manufacture of juices, etc., is less than that of 1923.

Information received from special inquiries and investigations indicates an average yield of 1200 pounds of dried raisins per acre. On the basis of 297,000 acres in bearing, the total production of dried raisins amounts to approximately 180,000 tons, which is much less than the crop produced last year. The tonnage of grapes of raisin varieties shipped this year is estimated to be about 180,000 tons, fresh basis, which is approximately 50,000 tons above the amount disposed of in this manner a year ago. The quality of raisins is very good.

Summing up the production of all three classes of grapes, the 1924 California grape crop will probably amount to 1,550,000 tons on a fresh basis.

McNally & Partridge, owners of the West Sacramento Auto Camp near the subway at the foot of Fifth street, report that business is good and, in fact, increasing, especially since the election on November 4. McNally, who is a good deal of a financier, claims to have noted a marked improvement in the tone of the travelers who pass his service station and of his customers who remain over night in his camp. Although an old-time Democrat, McNally is full of smiles these days with the feeling that the Bolshevik idea was snowed under.

Every house in the West Sacramento Auto Camp is occupied, according to Joe Pereira, and his principal trouble is that he does not have enough accommodations to take care of those seeking quarters. As Joe puts it, "It ain't going to rain no more, no more" for the auto owner who has a good top on his car and who can find a place to camp in a dry spot over night. Joe says it seems as if all the world was on wheels and instead of a decrease for the winter period there is an increase.

Mrs. Esther Newton has improved greatly during the past week in a Sacramento hospital and is now on the road to recovery. Probably she will be brought to her home in Washington next Monday or Tuesday completely recovered.

No meeting of the Boosters' Club was held last Tuesday evening because it was Armistice Day and there was a demonstration of the Masonic faternities in Sacramento that drew several of the officers of the club. The regular meeting of the Boosters' Club will be held next Tuesday evening as usual.

Last Monday afternoon at a road camp established on Margaret street, between Second and Third streets, a Mexican died a victim of the white plague. He had arrived with his wife in an automobile from Los Angeles on Sunday, November 9, and becoming seriously sick no relief was possible with the advanced stage of the disease from which he was suffering.

An appeal was made to Constable Buckingham, who notified Coroner Wilson, who took charge of the remains, conveying them to Woodland for burial. Owing to the fact that the family had just come from Los Angeles, residents of the neighborhood feared that the man died of the pneumonia plague and as a precautionary measure children of the neighborhood were kept out of school for a period of two days.

Following an inquest by Coroner Wilson and the finding that death came through tuberculosis, apprehension was relieved on the part of parents and residents of the neighborhood. The family were entire strangers in Washington and the wife of the Mexican has already moved to Woodland where the funeral took place last Wednesday. In the family treasury no funds were found and relief was advanced by the county authorities as well as other charitable organizations and people.

Miss Helen Dassonville is gradually recovering from a severe spell of sickness from which she has been suffering for several days. Yesterday her brother, Jack Dassonville, was taken suddenly ill and was forced to return from his work. He is now confined to his home under the attention of his physician.

A FEATURE OF THE ELECTION HELD ON NOVEMBER 4 NOT NOTED BY A GREAT MANY PEOPLE OF THIS DISTRICT MIGHT BE CALLED TO MIND TO THE GREAT ADVANTAGE OF SUPERVISOR H. B. BUCKINGHAM. IN THE TWO VOTING PRECINCTS OF NORTH AND SOUTH WASHINGTON BUCKINGHAM RECEIVED MORE VOTES THAN ALL THE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES COMBINED. THIS IS A TRIBUTE TO HIS POPULARITY AND INDICATES HOW HARD IT WAS FOR ANY MAN TO BEAT HIM IN THOSE TWO PRECINCTS.

Miss Eleanor Holmes is confined to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Holmes, by illness.

Mrs. Eamer Edenson and family, who have been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. H. Garber of this district for several days, returned to their Oakland home. Mrs. Garber is a sister-in-law of Mrs. Edenson. Herman Garber acompanied the Edensons to Oakland.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Cameron left Wednesday for San Francisco, where they will attend a ceremonial of the Shriners' lodge.

Fred Gussman spent Tuesday in Woodland on a business trip.

Mrs. Henry Jasper was a visitor in Washington Saturday night.

After spending a few days here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Crow, David Crow returned to Vina.

BROOKS DISCHARGED ACCOUNT OF LACK OF EVIDENCE

Accused of the theft of two electric motors from ranches in Yolo county, Barney Brooks of West Sacramento was arrested Saturday night by Deputy Sheriff Harry Murphy and Constable H. B. Buckingham of Washington and held at the county jail in Sacramento on suspicion of grand larceny.

Brooks was arrested when the officers found at his ranch two motors which were stolen, it is alleged, from Manuel Rose and E. C. Zacharids last July. Brooks claims the motors were given to him for security by a man to whom he loaned $100. He did not know the name or the address of the man to whom he loaned the money.

Several months ago Brooks was a witness for the prosecution at the trial of Charles S. Ralph, Sacramento fuel dealer, who is now serving a sentence at San Quentin prison for his conviction by a jury on a charge of selling short weight coal to a city school.

When Brooks' preliminary hearing was to take place last Thursday in Judge Barry's court in Washington, District Attorney George T. Kern failed to prosecute because of the impossibility of reaching a conviction, owing to lack of evidence.

RAINFALL TO DATE IS 3.69 INCHES ABOVE NORMAL

The storm which swept over Northern California Saturday and Sunday brought the total rainfall for the year in this section up to 3.69 inches. N. R. Taylor, meterologist in charge of the Sacramento branch of the federal weather bureau, said this brings the season's total to 1.86 inches above the seasonal normal.

Taylor added that all rivers in the Sacramento watershed have reached a normal stage for the first time in more than a year.

The week-end storm melted most of the snow in the mountains, only about three inches being left.

WHY NOT HOLD THE TEACHERS INSTITUTE DURING VACATION?

Last week the pupils of the public schools of Yolo County had a vacation of three days because the county teachers institute was holding a session in Esparto.

Of course, all the children of the public schools were delighted because such a thing as the teachers institute became the means of giving them a few days' vacation. Any child who would not rejoice at this opportunity would be considered, and should be considered, abnormal.

But there are many parents who wonder why it is that the teachers cannot hold their institute either during the midsummer vacation or the Christmas vacation.

Those parents claim that there are too few school days in the school year anyway, only 172, and out of those 172 days the teachers take three for their institute.

It is not exactly so bad in Yolo County as it is in Sacramento where the teachers draw pay even during vacation periods. This is not the case in Yolo County and the teachers might be entitled to hold institute during the school period.

But if the teachers are so deeply imbued with the benefit the pupils obtain during school hours, why is it that the teachers institute is held during school period?

DEATH HAS CLAIMED ALBERT E. JAMES AFTER VARIED CAREER

In his boathouse, alone, with no ministering hand to ease the pain of death and with no tender care to help relieve the pain, Albert E. James, better known as "Jitney" James, died some time last Wednesday, his remains being found about 6 p. m. Wednesday evening when Frank De Riso, Jr., called to give him a little attention such as he had been accustomed to do for many months past.

On Tuesday, November 4, James insisted on going to the polls to vote for Henry Buckingham. That was practically the last real effort of his life, for since that time he has been confined to his bed anticipating the visit of the Grim Reaper and thoroughly resigned to give up his soul from the body that was racked with pain, distress and sickness for a long time.

James had been a resident of Washington during the past twenty-six years. To a great extent he was a recluse, never associating with women but sometimes taking some poor derelict into his boathouse in an offer of shelter.

Lately James has been practically blind. He knew the path so well, however, from his boathouse to the postoffice and to Sacramento that he easily found his way and when in distress everybody tendered him a helping hand.

He was sixty-two years of age, was a naturalized citizen of the United States, was born in Australia and had no relatives in this locality so far as is known at the present time.

About a month ago he was arrested by federal officers for selling intoxicating liquors. About six months ago he was also arrested by Yolo County officers for selling intoxicating liquors, but owing to his condition Judge Harrison of Woodland dismissed the case against him and he escaped without a fine.

It was only by selling intoxicating liquors that "Jitney" James could make an existence and he continued to do so during the past two or three years.

James was a member of the Eagles, which organization will, no doubt, take care of his funeral and provide him with decent burial.

A will was found in the boathouse where "Jitney" James made his home. The will bequeathed all his worldly possessions to Frank De Riso, Jr., except his watch and chain which he bequeathed to Supervisor Henry Buckingham.

A bank book was found showing that he had made deposits in the Bank of Italy in the amount of $570 and some few dollars in ready cash were found in his clothes when his remains were discovered.

James' career was surely a varied one. During many years he made a living by fishing and hunting or until his sight became so poor he could not follow that means of earning a livelihood. He was not the most law-abiding citizen in the country but he was simply a natural man born on the plains and accustomed to hustle to meet the demands of existence.

His funeral will be held Saturday in Woodland.

In the will found following his demise, H. B. Buckingham was named as administrator.

COMPLAINT FILED BY RIVER TRANSPORTATION LINE

CONDITION OF HENRY LEINBERGER IS CONSIDERED VERY SERIOUS

Still confined to his bed, Henry Leinberger Sr. seems to be gradually approaching the gate that leads to the Great Beyond and, although the vitality that preserved him during ninety-four years is still strong, he is gradually losing ground, not in a physical way so much as in his mental faculties.

During several days of the past week the old gentleman has been delirious and is under the constant care of two nurses and a physician. At times he is hard to control, but members of his immediate family are so solicitous of him that he lacks for nothing and is kept constantly advised of the condition of the business over which he worries so much and over which he supervised for so many years.

Mr. Leinberger passed his ninety-fourth year and until the time he was taken sick with a sore leg, a few weeks ago, was able to be around, attending to the duties that called him in the supervision of the local slaughter house.

His friends and neighbors are hoping for the best and want to see him around again in the near future.

SCHOOL TEACHERS GIVE JEWEL TO SUPERINTENDENT

Woodland, Nov. 8.—Miss Harriet S. Lee, county superintendent of schools, was honored this afternoon at the closing of the Yolo County teachers institute, which has been held so successfully this week in the Esparto union high school.

With contributions given by the teachers, Principal H. A. Sawyer of Esparto purchased a gorgeous diamond and sapphire brooch, set in platinum. Mrs. A. G. Proctor of the Woodland high school, made the presentation speech.

Miss Lee was so affected that she could barely find words to express her appreciation.

Members of the city and county district schools are united in praising Miss Lee for the efficient manner in which she conducts the affairs of her office.
